

NFL POWER RANKINGS

WEEK 15 Craig Morgan

RANK	TEAM
1	Pittsburgh Steelers	Sunday's game against New England should decide the AFC's top seed.
2	New England Patriots	Tom Brady had a bad day in a loss to the Dolphins. We probably won't see another one this season.
3	Philadelphia Eagles	The Eagles aren't cursed by unseen forces. It just feels that way after Carson Wentz's ACL tear.
4	Minnesota Vikings	What does it mean that Vikings QB Case Keenum, Eagles QB Nick Foles & Rams QB Jared Goff all played for Jeff Fisher the last 3 seasons?
5	Jacksonville Jaguars	I'm still trying to figure out why Jacksonville has a football team.
6	Los Angeles Rams	Why did coach Sean McVay run play-action late in a loss to the Eagles with his starting RT out and the Rams running well?
7	New Orleans Saints	The NFL confirmed former that Falcon Phil McKinnely served as a down judge for the Falcons' win over the game. Just wow.
8	Carolina Panthers	Daryl Worley posted the first INT by a Carolina CB all season in a win over the Vikings.
9	Seattle Seahawks	The Seahawks' linebacker injuries could loom large against the Rams this week.
10	Atlanta Falcons	Atlanta's victory sets up an incredible three-team race in the NFC South.
11	Tennessee Titans	Marcus Mariota just isn't a very good quarterback.
12	Los Angeles Chargers	Two LA playoff teams? That would be something considering the way this season started.
13	Baltimore Ravens	The Ravens' path to the playoffs is pretty easy: Browns, Colts, Bengals.
14	Dallas Cowboys	The Cowboys are just like the Packers. They'll get their superstar back (Ezekiel Elliott) one week too late to matter.
15	Kansas City Chiefs	To paraphrase a friend: The AFC West race is like watching three blind dogs fighting over a chicken bone.
16	Detroit Lions	The Lions need to win out against the Bears, Bengals and Packers. Laying odds their dream dies in that final week.
17	Green Bay Packers	You admire the Packers for keeping their playoff hopes alive for Aaron Rodgers. It won't matter, though. The won't make it.
18	Oakland Raiders	The Raiders are the NFL's most disappointing team.
19	Buffalo Bills	Three weeks left for the Bills to find a way to extend the NFL's longest playoff drought to 18 seasons.
20	Arizona Cardinals	Carson Palmer can come back if he wants now. I'm convinced Blaine Gabbert is a backup QB.
21	New York Jets	The Jets had 100 yards of offense in a loss to the Broncos.
22	Cincinnati Bengals	The Bengals' 33-7 loss to the Bears was its worst home loss since a 34-3 loss to Baltimore in 2008.
23	Washington Redskins	The Redskins lost RB Byron Marshall to a hamstring injury when he stumbled on the turf trying to field a kickoff. Seriously.
24	Miami Dolphins	What a performance by Jay Cutler to beat the Patriots. He'll throw three picks against the Bills this week -- one a pick-6.
25	Houston Texans	Joining the chorus: How was Tom Savage allowed to return to the game last week?
26	Chicago Bears	Mitch Trubisky had his best performance in a win over the Bengals.
27	Denver Broncos	The Broncos snapped their longest losing streak (8 games) since joining the NFL in 1970 with a 23-0 shutout of the Jets.
28	Tampa Bay Buccaneers	Why is Dirk Koetter on the hot seat after less than two seasons -- one a winning season?
29	Indianapolis Colts	Officially retired Devin Hester won't make the Hall of Fame, but he should. He's the best ever at what he did.
30	San Francisco 49ers	Let's slow down that Jimmy Garoppolo hype train a bit. There have been good signs, but we're a long way from great.
31	New York Giants	I will take this belief to my grave: Eli Manning was overrated.
32	Cleveland Browns	It's almost like Cleveland is trying to lose.